The Best Home Cooking Of Today Is Made Possible by Using the

DUPLIX Fireless Cooker

The Duplex diminishes the high cost of living by cutting down more than one-half the fuel cost, and a large per cent of the food cost by conserving the juices and all the nutriment contained in any article of diet. Enough will be saved every few months to pay for the most complete Duplex.

The Duplex actually cooks the entire meal in the most nutritious and economical way.

The Duplex is a reliable, silent servant that cooks the meals in your absence, without burning or over-cooking.

The Duplex lightens the work of cooking.

The Duplex will stew, boil or roast a cut of meat, making it tender and juicy and free from shrinkage. Fruits and vegetables keep their shape, retain all their flavor, making them not only more palatable, but more digestible.

The Aluminum Lined, Steel Case Duplex Fireless Stove is made of practically indestructible material, and with ordinary care will last for years.

The Duplex Fireless Cooker is made in sizes appropriate for any family. Priced from $6.25.

WE SPEAKERS SPEAKER CLARK

Benton Chinn Challenges
Statement That There Were
No Conscripts in Lee's Army.

QUOTES FROM WAR HISTORY

"Every man whom Gen. Lee commanded at Gettysburg was a conscript, and I was one of them. Every man with Gen. Lee at the Wilderness and at Cold Harbor was a conscript, and I was one of them. Stonewall Jackson accomplished the valley campaign with conscripts, and I was with him."

So Benton Chinn, Confederate veteran of Alexandria, Va., replied to the assertion of Speaker Clark of the House of Representatives in his address Tuesday at the time National Security League leaders presented a petition signed by 1,000,000 persons who support the principle of universal military training, and Mr. Clark declared: "The War Department is jumping around here trying to bulldoze every one into supporting this conscription bill, and they can't do it. Don't you think Lee had a good army at Gettysburg—and there was not a conscript among them?"

"After I saw that statement of Mr. Clark I could not sleep," said Mr. Chinn yesterday at The Star office, "and as soon as I could get started this morning I left my home in Virginia and came down here immediately to do my little bit for my country in this hour of need."

"Of Co. H, 6th Virginia Cavalry."

At this point Mr. Chinn, raising aloft a large book, which later proved to be "The Lost Cause," by Edward A. Pollard, editor of the Richmond, Va., Examiner during the civil war, and said to be "the standard southern history of the late war," remarked: "I am Benton Chinn, late of Company H, 6th Virginia Cavalry, Payne's Brigade, Fitz Lee's division of the Army of Northern Virginia."

Opening the book to page 220, under the chapter headed "The Conscription Law," Mr. Chinn pointed to one statement after another of the historian which told of the work of conscription for the Confederate armies and the great need for the system.

"A short time before the expiration of its official life, the first quotation, 'the provisional congress passed a law, the effect of which was to almost disband the army in the field and put the Confederacy at the mercy of the enemy. Never was there such a silly and visionary measure of demagogues applied to the desperate exigencies and severe demands of a state of war.'"

The purpose was to persuade the two-month volunteers to re-enlist, and to do this congress passed a law granting a furlough of sixty days to those who pledged themselves to re-enlist for the term of the war. This extraordinary measure was inspired by the military genius of President Davis and was directly recommended by him.

Cites Effect of the Measure.

"It depleted our armies in the face of the enemy; it filled our military commanders with consternation; it carried alarm, confusion and demoralization everywhere. Our army near the line of the Potomac, under the effect of this ill-timed and ill-judged law, was melting like snow. The streets of Richmond were almost daily filled with long processions of furloughed soldiers, moving from the railroad depots on their way home. Gen. Beauregard had taken the alarm before he left the Army of the Potomac and had ordered the men to stand by their colors."

Not a Time for Hesitation.

"But it was no time to hesitate for popularity and to entertain the prejudices of the ignorant when the entire fortunes of the country were at stake. The conscription law was barely in time to save the Confederacy. At another period the Confederate secretary of war stated that thirty days after the passage of this law the terms of 148 regiments would have expired and left us at the mercy of an enemy, which had every guarantee of success that numbers, discipline, complete organization and perfect equipment could effect."

"The law of the 16th of April withdrew every non-exempt citizen between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five years from state control and placed him absolutely at the disposal of the president during the war. It annulled all contracts made with volunteers for short terms, holding them in service for two years additional, should the war continue for that long. All twelve-month recruits, below eighteen and over thirty-five, who otherwise would have been exempted by this law, were to be retained in service for ninety days after their term expired."

INSTRUCTORS ARE SCARCE.

Schools Find It Difficult to Get Physical Culture Mentors.

Lack of male physical culture instructors for public schools throughout the entire country, and causing a slight shortage at least, in Washington, is prophesied by officials of the public schools of the District of Columbia. At present no applicant for such a position is on the waiting lists of the schools, and it is probable that one or more instructors will be needed during the next year.

The shortage is due to the fact that the United States bureau of education today sent out a memorandum quoting Dr. Charles W. Elliot, former president of Harvard University, in which he urges greater attention be paid to education along this line in America.

Names have been given to 727 minor planets and new ones are being discovered all the time.
